PEACE OF MIND

Luxury brands with high-value products or high volumes of store traffic need physical security options that can be tailor made to look as elegant, sleek and stunning as the brand itself.

Security is essential to any retailer, but luxury goods demand a security solution that is aesthetically pleasing, blends with brand style but acts as a real deterrent.

Stackdoor Security grilles are bespoke to meet client's individual needs, giving peace of mind that stores are secure against theft, vandalism or serious criminal attempts.

Bvlgari chose the Standard Stackdoor as their security solution. This grille was mounted externally over the main entrance doors and colour matched to the luxury jewellery brand's distinctive gold finish.

MINIMALIST DESIGN

With sleek lines and a high quality finish, the minimalist appearance of the Stackdoor blends with the essential elements of a luxury retail brand.

Its robust but lightweight design suits a variety of architecture styles, whether contemporary, heritage or stunningly structural.

Located in a landmark building in the historic 'Cast Iron District' of New York, this Balenciaga store boasts the most comprehensive example of the brand's 'Raw Architecture Concept'.

Constructed in 1908, the distinctive brick and mortar façade of this beautiful building is echoed by the high quality stack-and-pin technology of the Stackdoor grille system.

The industrial stainless steel finish of Standard Stackdoor complemented the 'Raw architecture' theme.

MAXIMUM VISIBILITY

With up to 80% open area, the Stackdoor security system is designed to give maximum visibility without compromising on security.

The bars of this innovative security grille stack smoothly into a minimal space at the top of the curtain, completely removing the need for a bulky head box.

For this large 'L shaped' store frontage, the Stackdoor Corner was a perfect solution, needing neither a central corner post nor a corner floor fixing, giving a free open space spanning a vast store frontage.

Chanel also needed the shutter to disappear into the ceiling void completely, so when open, there is no sign of the Stackdoor and the opening has a seamless finish.

FLEXIBILITY OF DESIGN

This revolutionary security system can follow architectural plan profiles, with the Stackdoor Curve and Stackdoor Corner options being tailored to bespoke retail designs.

This flexibility of design was central to the decision making process when Prada specified this unusual 'S' shaped Stackdoor for their flagship store in an Australian airport terminal.

The subtle profile curve of the shop entrance meant that a straight security grille would have spoilt the appearance, but the bespoke 'S' curve by Stackdoor was the perfect solution.

The black powder coating was chosen to echo the brand colour and reinforce the strong stylish design of the store's flooring and the bright frontage.

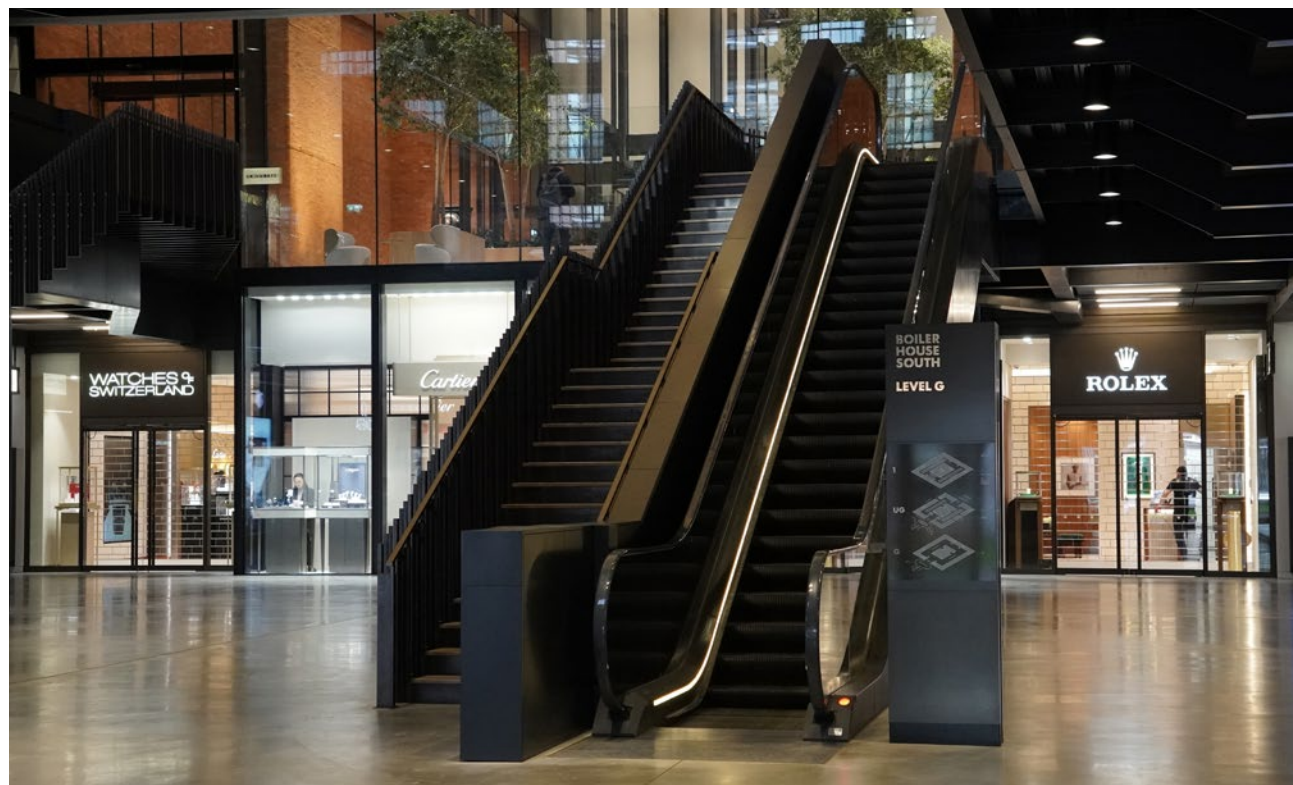

The Stackdoor Curve follows the gentle 'S' shape of the architecture.

THE REASSURANCE OF SECURITY

High-design façades and stylish store fronts deserve high quality security solutions that will align with the store design as well as match up to the personality of the luxury brand.

Many retailers require high visibility of their luxury goods for after-hours browsing, but not at the expense of security protection.

The flexibility of the Stackdoor system aligns with these desires plus gives the reassurance of being an officially approved solution.

Stackdoor Secure has been approved by the Building Research Establishment (BRE) to their security standard LPS 1175 Issue 8 A1, making it one of the most secure grille systems available.

As the building is open after normal shopping hours, two famous brands, Watches of Switzerland and Rolex both chose Stackdoor as their security option.
